To Game Developers Conference Attendees:

San Francisco is looking forward to hosting Game Developers Conference attendees and exhibitors on March 16-20, 2020. This annual event creates inspiration and critical connections for the many thousands of people who gather in San Francisco to attend this landmark industry event.

With the recent media attention on the new coronavirus, we want you to know that, according to the San Francisco Department of Public Health, "There are zero confirmed cases of novel coronavirus in San Francisco, and the risk to the general public is low." The Health Department will make an announcement if the situation here changes. Meanwhile, they recommend that everyone practice common sense prevention such as frequent hand washing in order to prevent illness. If you are sick, please stay home and do not attend work, school or conferences.

We also want to assure you that the official agencies are being extremely proactive to keep visitors and residents safe and healthy. We are in frequent contact with experts at the following departments:

- The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention are closely monitoring and taking steps to contain the coronavirus, known as COVID-19, in the U.S.
- The San Francisco Department of Public Health is providing updated information about prevention and control of the virus within the city.
- The Department of Homeland Security is providing updated information related to travel restrictions and enhanced screening procedures for travelers going between China and the U.S.
- At San Francisco International Airport, the Centers for Disease Control (CDC) are conducting health screenings for eligible international arriving passengers, and providing guidance on necessary health measures.
- The Moscone Center is following recommendations set forth in the U.S. EPA's Emerging Pathogen Policy regarding cleaning disinfectants effective against the coronavirus (2019-nCoV).

We are excited to welcome you to San Francisco.

Sincerely,

Joe D'Alessandro
President and CEO
